HUMANE SOCIETY WILL GIVE FOUNTAIN TO CITY

DRINKING FOUNTAIN CITY WILL GET FOR NOTHING.

City officials have received a letter from the secretary of the National Humane Alliance, of New York, offering to donate to the municipality a massive stone drinking fountain for horses and dogs, on condition that the city will give a site therefor. The fountain is to be of Maine granite, six feet eight inches in height, weighing five tons, and costing about $1,000. It consists of a massive stone base, upon which rests a great granite bowl six feet in diameter, and above which a cubical stone column rises to a height of about two feet. The fountain is to be delivered without charge, the freight being prepaid. The bowl is so large and of such shape that horses can approach from every direction and drink at the same time. The supply of water is constantly replenished from head-offices above the bowl. Below the large bowl are smaller ones, which pour out a continuous stream.

on all four sides of the base, designed for the use of dogs.

The fountains are donated from time to time to cities accepting the terms and conditions, and the selection of Richmond for this purpose is regarded as highly complimentary to the city, few in the entire country having been so honored. Cities which have received such fountains are as follows: Albany, Auburn, Birmingham, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Troy, N. Y.; Burlington, Vt.; Cleveland, Ohio; Dayton, Iowa; Derby, Conn.; Des Moines, Iowa; Mexico City, Mexico; Milwaukee, Wis.; Moline, Ill.; Newark, N. J.; Ottumwa, Iowa; Pasadena, Cal.; and Middletown, N. Y. It will be seen from this list that Richmond is the first Southern city to receive such an offer, and that but ten States of the Union have received them.

The offer of the National Humane Alliance has been referred to the Committee on Grounds and Buildings, which will recommend a site and the acceptance of the proposition.
